[WorldCat.org]

Morphology deals with the understanding of how words are formed while syntax is focused on the way sentences are developed.

Basically morphology is the study of the structure of words, while Syntax studies the structure of sentences. Together these disciplines help linguists understand how language works.

Morphology and Syntax
Language is comprised
of sounds, words,
phrases and sentences.
At all levels, language is rule-based. At the sound level, phonology
refers to the rules of the sound system and the rules of sound
combination.
