My 2006 Saturn Vue (170k+ mi.) runs super strong and smooth. However, it makes a knocking noise when first cranked but it goes away after the oil pressure builds. I've been told there is an arm or lever that rises with the oil pressure that is related to or a component of the timing belt and mine is sticking down until oil pressure Max is reached. If I start the car and let it idle or "warm up ...
