The poster at the top of this article is totally misleading. It gives the impression that this is a 1970s West German-style sex comedy; in fact it is a rather stern morality tale about a ruthless woman running a physiotherapy clinic, while mercilessly exploiting her customers, particularly an elderly love-starved lady who she bleeds

Called With These Hands: The Rebirth of the American Craftsman, it's an atmospheric depiction of "human beings, who in this age of computers and mechanization, take joy and pride in the simple act of creation," as the narrator intones. We see clay sculptor Clayton Bailey blaring "Scotland the Brave" on bagpipes as he marches through a ...
